

ABSTRACT

The present invention includes a network interconnection in a wireless communication system and a method to send a message from a first wireless network to a second wireless network via the network interconnection. In one embodiment, the method includes receiving the message in a first format compatible with the first wireless network and translating the message from the first format directly into a second format compatible with the second wireless network.